"We have to become humble in front of this overwhelming misery, overwhelming fornication, overwhelming growth, and overwhelming lack of order."

Sweetmorn, Chaos 1, 3178 YOLD

Dear Pope Oldboyfloats,

How was your new year? Mine was celebrated in style. Whilst all the "citizens" were prepairing for their Gregorian New Years Eve, I was getting ready for a full-on all-out Discordian New Year (which happens to fall on the same day).

The evening started simply, with beer, punch, and friends. Things quickly got better: more beer, more punch, Conjac (straight from the bottle, of course), fireworks, marijuana, illegal fireworks, the best view in town, and space cake.

Thus, with a strong blessing from St. Gulik, the year of OUR LADY of DISCORD 3178 started.

When we decided to play card games I briefly feared we were becoming middle class. These fears were eradicated when one of my companions produced a bong shaped like two dragons.

We played a local variant of spoons. In this game you have to complete a hand and then grab a spoon from the center of the table. When someone does this the cards cease to matter and everyone rushes to grab a spoon. One person ends up without a spoon; this is the loser.

--Chaos--

The first thing we noticed was that due to the speed of the game it didn't matter if the cards were dealt face up. No human could have kept track of them anyway.

--Discord--

We then decided to ditch the spoons. This is a common variation. Instead of taking spoons you stick out your tongue, or put your thumb on the edge of the table. Neither of these was good enough for us.

We went ~~freestyle~~ freestyle i.e. any sufficiently wierd/noticable action counted. Soon we were whisteling, dancing, gurgeling, and smashing our heads on the table.

--Confusion--

A question about the rules was soon asked, as is likely to happen when new games are invented.

We needed to know if mirror images counted:

The answer we came to was NO. This caused a bigger change in the game than anticipated. Now you needed to not only copy everyone else, you had to copy one specific person, without any clear sign who that person was.

--Bureaucracy--

Someone then figured out that the only way to be sure was to quickly do every possible move that the original person could be doing. But this movement made it even harder to figure out what you were supposed to do.

In the end we couldn't even figure out who had won or lost. We had become slaves to our own rules, unable to function.

--Aftermath--

It all ended at six in the morning with none of us wanting to play anymore and all of us wanting to go home. We wanted to start our new year. Had we learned anything? of course not.

With that, I hope Eris blesses you with a happy new year.

Hail Eris, All Hail Discordia,

ON THE OPTIMAL USAGE OF STORAGE SPACE

It has often been said that a discordian can walk into a disorderly (eristic) room, and instead of recoiling in disgust say "Hail Eris" and get on with his bussiness. This of course requests the question: What exactly is a messy room (and why are people conducting bussiness there?)

As any discordian who has actually read the Principia Discordia knows (If you haven't read it, go read it now. It's much better than this crap) we use our mind to project reality onto a grid. This Grid defines order and disorder, although both do not actually exist.

Thus there is no such thing as a disorderly room, and, conversely, there is no such thing as a orderly room. Thus we can do away with the idea that if you remove all the stuff from the floor the room will be ordered. In fact, this is a waste of space (because you have perfectly good space on the floor that you are not using).

This is known as the Greater Shelf Theory.

THE OFFICIAL DISCORDIAN ROOM ORGANIZATION

To truly organize a room you should put as many organs in at as will fit. Harpsichords or organnelles will do in a pinch.
