The Book of Eris
Or:
The Invocation of
the Flesh of Unreason:
Also Known As:
ἄλογία
Or:
αλογος

On the night that Luna is fully exposed and proud, go out into the woods with a partner and find a clearing. In the clearing, use an iron blade to draw the following diagram in the earth:

Leave room enough at the center to stand. Place a candle at the most northern, eastern, southern, and western points along the circumference of the diagram. In the center of the diagram, place a seat on which to rest the body. Light an incense of equal parts lavender, frankincense, and mugwort and remove the clothing entirely. Your partner should chant the Latin phrases while you begin chanting thusly:

Did I fling that apple? Yes.

Did I set things into motion? Yes.

Am I stochastic of body? Yes.

Did I eat that hot dog. Yes.

That is why all things are not things but something to consider

For if it were anyone but me, I would not be Eris.

Credo quia absurdum est.

You are the reincarnation of the true God

You are decked out in roses
Come, O Starchild and be their god

Come for me, O Ærastís
O Eris, I adore thee

Iô Ærohtodidáskalos
The Instructor in the ways of love

Iô Ærohtomanía
The frenzied one

Iô Kallisti
The most beautiful one

Fly or fall
O Idiot God

Iô Eris
The chaos and the lust

Come for me, O Ærastís
O Eris, I adore thee

The Door to Wisdom opens like legs
She Is Risen, All Is Mental

Let the wines of ecstasy spill at the arrival of Eris. Present to Her your wish and bow at her feet.
